FRANK B. KELLOGG SUCCEEDS HARVEY

Washington, Oct. 25.—Frank B. Kellogg, former United States Senator from Minnesota, "a lame duck," has been selected for American Ambassador to London.

He will succeed George Harvey, who recently resigned, and the appointment is expected to become effective in the near future.

Kellogg, a Republican politician of the bigger type, joined the "lame duck" class the last time he tried to be nominated for the Senate. Minnesota was too progressive for him and he went down and out.

'WIZARD' STEINMETZ DIES SUDDENLY AT 59

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Dr. Charles Proteus Steinmetz, electrical wizard, died suddenly while eating breakfast when he was preparing to come here at 11 o'clock this morning.

The physicians issued the following statement:

"Dr. Steinmetz died suddenly of acute dilation of the heart, following a chronic myocarditis of many years' standing, which is weakening of the heart muscle."

Dr. Steinmetz had been ill since his return from a recent trip to the Pacific coast, but was believed to be recovering. His death was a shock to the people here.

CORCORAN GOT HIS $17,500

James L. Donovan, Boston teacher man, trapped and shaken down by the Blackmail ring, was tossed much as a piece of raw meat to defense attorneys today in the extortion trial in Superior Court and growling they went at him.

He had finished telling how he had paid $17,500 in cold cash to his attorney, John F. McDonald, to study the insatiable appetite of the alleged blackmailers.

COPPER SLAIN BY THREE DOPE FIENDS

Patrimin Patrick J. Burns of Station 14 Back Bay, was brutally murdered by three men.

Seeking revenge for the arrest of one of their number, they ambushed Burns as he walked his beat early in the morning and clubbed him into insensibility.

Burns died at City Hospital of pneumonia, the result of internal injuries from the kicking he received.

In a deathbed talk with his wife and sister, he described the attack and tried to name one of the attackers whom he recognized.

Police at first believed Burns fell on the slippery pavement. Mystery was thrown around his injuries, and Mrs. Mae Burns, his widow of eighteen months, told her husband's story today.

It was ambushed by three dope fiends in an alley off St. Botolph street about 2 o'clock in the morning. Burns told his wife and sister, many, April 9, 1865, and came to this country thirty-four years ago. Dr. Steinmetz left Switzerland on September 1 for the Pacific Coast. On the way he delivered numerous lectures in the middle Western states. When he left home his physicians, Dr. H. P. Grossbeck, advised him to be careful about over-exercising.

DR. CHARLES P. STEINMETZ, ELECTRICAL WIZARD, DROPS DEAD

But he insisted on keeping all his engagements and the efforts were vainly shown when he returned.

It was his first trip to the Pacific coast. Accompanying him were his adopted son, J. L. R. Hayden, General Electric engineer, and members of the Hayden family. They returned to Schenectady October 13.

Of all the accomplishments for which he was noted, Dr. Steinmetz was hailed everywhere on his trip probably more for his invention of artificial lightning than anything else.

This achievement, which gave him the popular title of "Jove, the Hurricane of Schenectady," was the result of his studies of transient phenomena, one of his three most important inventions, according to his own estimate of his work.

MAKER OF LIGHTNING

Dr. Steinmetz, for several years had been chief electrical engineer at the General Electric Company's plant in this city. He was regarded the world over as an electrical genius.

Only a few months ago Dr. Steinmetz increased miniature thunder and lightning. This was considered one of his masterpieces.

He read was the lightning that under the hand of Dr. Steinmetz small trees erected in his laboratory could be demolished.

When Steinmetz came to this country he landed in New York precisely, he didn't know a soul and he didn't even know the language.

LANDED HERE PENLESS.

For days the poor hunchback roamed the streets of New York looking for a job. Finally he found a place as a draughtsman at $12 a week—just enough to keep body and soul together.

But his wonderful genius brought him upward rapidly. Within five years he had made a name for himself among electrical engineers. He believed that electricity was a heaven sent boon to humanity. He believed that the steam age soon would send them back to the earth.

He took a deep interest in world affairs and started his admirers, who knew him as a man of peace, was declared that American should force disarmament on the world by building a navy as great as other power could compete with it.

His death cuts short many plans for lighting the land that the use of coal for fuel has forced on man's shoulders. He had a plan to send electric power around the world by radio.

SAW MILLENNIUM.

He believed that electric power would bring on a millennium when man would get to be forced to labor. He had a plan to find the human race on marbles bred under the care of direction of scientists.

Said he: "It's only a matter for the biological engineers to give flavor to the microbes and they can do the work, because of the rapidly with which micro-organisms multiply. They can make experiments within an hour on a whole generation of microbes."

Scientists took his idea of building "artificial canals" in the cities and set to work on experiments.

"People have worked too long," Steinmetz told the world, and he gave to life to making them free from old ideas.

WROTE MANY BOOKS.

Dr. Steinmetz was the author of many books, including "Theory and Calculation of Alternating Current Phenomena," "Theoretical Elements of Electrical Engineering," and "General Lectures on Electrical Engineering."

He was educated in Germany and Switzerland. In America he was first employed by a firm in New York, N. Y., which was absorbed by the General Electric, the company for which Dr. Steinmetz was working when he died.

He was a socialist and in 1915 was elected President of the Municipal Council on that ticket.

He was nominated for State En-

GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY EXPERT WAS FAMOUS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

These poses of Dr. Charles Proteus Steinmetz were snapped at the time he was explaining his wonderful discoveries at the General Electric Company laboratory in Schenectady, N. Y., relating to the "harnessing" of thunder and lightning. He gave demonstrations to show that "lightning bolts" could be hurled for miles by human agency.

ginner on the Revere ticket but was defeated.

During the war he served as a member of the Naval Advisory Board. He held degrees from a number of educational institutions. He had been three times appointed member of the Schenectady Board of Education and at one time was president of the board. He was a member of the board at the time of his death. Some years ago he was a member of the City Planning commission. He took an active part in the planning of new sections of the city.

In 1902 he was awarded a degree of A. M. by Harvard and the following year Union College at Schenectady conferred upon him the degree of Ph. D. In 1905 he caught the fatal illness.

He was a warm personal friend of Thomas A. Edison. Less than a year ago Mr. Edison and a party of other leading electrical authorities were entertained by Dr. Steinmetz at his laboratory in the General Electric plant.

It was at that time that Dr. Steinmetz showed Mr. Edison how he could produce thunder and lightning. After hearing the thunder and seeing the lightning flash about the room, Mr. Edison called the invention "wonderful."

Edison Shocked by Steinmetz's Death

West Orange, N. J., Oct. 26.—"The world has lost one of its greatest mathematicians and the electrical industry will miss one of its shining lights," said Thomas A. Edison today when informed of the death of Charles P. Steinmetz at Schenectady. The famous inventor was shocked at the news.

ADVICE OF OCULISTS

STOLEN AS HE PLAYED NEAR HOME

A stranger tale has never been told than that of Andrew Griffin. He was kidnaped. For seven long years he was lost to his parents as though dead. Then suddenly, a few days ago, he walked into his mother's arms in Rockland, Me. Years before, his father, Boston's first taziab manager, had died of a broken heart. Daniel J. Doleys, his attorney, had spent years in the search but failed.

Yesterday, in the Boston American, he began the story of his life following his kidnaping. He did not remember the kidnaping. He was too young. Today his sister, Mary Griffin, tells about it. It is the missing link in Andrew's story. Later Andrew resumes his own story. Today read that of his sister.

By MARY GRIFFIN

In relating the story of my brother's strange kidnapping it should first be told how our family happened to move to Westport, Me., from Roxbury, Mass. You know we hadn't lived in Westport two months when little Andrew was taken from us—to return seven years later in just as strange a manner in which he was snatched from

To begin with I should say that Andrew was born in Boston. Our family was living at 100 Burrell street in Roxbury when he came to An influential statement of the President's viewpoint followed the receipt of the letter by the White House. Mr. Hearst's newspapers had denounced verities of what might prove to be a vicious assault upon the scientific system now in vogue of generating the more than $2,000,000,000 which the government needs to run its business.

It was said the public now feel safe in assuming that President Coolidge regards the patent as a personal achievement of value to the country, and that the fact is applicable in a yet doubtless manner to be mentioned.

While President Coolidge is blazing a path of his own, formulating a campaign that will give birth to what the country will look upon as distinctly "Coolidge policies," he is in the vanguard with the late President Harding's attitude on the budget. That attitude was summarized by Mr. Harding when he said, in his budget message to the last Congress:

"I may say without fear of exaggeration that we have been during the past two years co-laborers in the greatest reform in our financial history."

U. S. SEES PARIS BALKING AT PARLEY PLAN

London, Oct. 25. (A.P.)—France, Belgium and Italy have accepted the British invitation for a reparations conference with the understanding that it shall take the form of a committee of experts under the authority of the permanent international reparations commission.

Washington, Oct. 25. (A.P.)—Condemned French acceptance of the proposal that a committee of economic experts be created to determine Germany's capacity to pay reparations, reported in Paris dispatches, injects a new angle into the negotiations discussed by publication of correspondence between Secretary Hughes and Lord Curzon, British Foreign Minister.

Official said today that Premier Poincaré's satisfaction of the willingness of France to accept the commission plan, subject to the stipulation that the commissioners be named by the Reparations Commission, had not yet reached the State Department and pending its arrival the United States Government can merely watch developments.

The statement in Paris dispatches that the British had suggested that members of the proposed economic commission be named by the reparations commission seems to indicate that unity of action, believed by the United States to be essential to the success of any plan, has not yet been achieved.

An analysis of the British-American correspondence shows three possible methods outlined by Lord Curzon: First, through the calling of an international conference; second, through the appointment of an economic commission representative of all the powers concerned in German reparations; and the United States; and third, through the calling of a conference or appointment of an economic commission representative of only a part of the reparations powers and the United States.

Mr. Hughes expressed the willingness of the United States to join in a conference in which all of the reparations powers participated. He expressed again the American belief that the economic commission plan afforded the most probable way to success, but pointed out the United States could not appoint a member to the reparations commission, although American experts undoubtedly by could participate in an economic commission.

On any suggestion that a conference or commission plan be followed by the powers in agreement on that course but without French and probably Belgian participation, Mr. Hughes reserved decision.

"Weeping Eyes" Are Latest Fad of Parisiennes

Paris, Oct. 25.—"Weeping eyes" are the latest thing in Parisienne make-ups.

At balls and other fashionable gatherings the French beauties are appearing now with their eyes reddened as if they had been crying. The face is covered with cream, a yellow substance.

When the beauty laughs, the apparently weeping eyes and the smiling lips present a strange contrast.

He said if she came to Syracuse he would hire her as a housekeeper, at $15 a week.

ONE POLICEMAN DEAD, 1 SHOT, IN RUM WAR

Jersey City, Oct. 25 (U.S.B.)—With one policeman dead and another wounded, police and prohibition agents today were seeking to follow the trail of what they think is a powerful rum ring.

Both shootings, they believe, resulted from a bottle war.

Patrolman Timothy O'Connell, found with a hole in the back of his head, died in the hospital without being able to tell what had occurred.

Patrolman Nicholas Grunich of the Hudson police was shot down after he had turned a quantity of beer thought to have been stolen.

Fifteen arrests have been made.

Parrot Saves Family by Shout of 'Fire'; Perishes Itself

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 25 (U.S.B.)—A parrot scolding "fire!" saved the lives of Joseph Stenman and his family of the Woodside section of Halifax.

The blaze was extinguished once, but broke out again, raising the building and destroying its contents at a loss of $4,000. The feathered hero was suffocated.

Despite the fact that Cribbich said he had been shot by James Graham, alias Jimmy Andrews, alleged "bad man," Michael Desnoire, 41, of the broken has confessed to firing the shot, police say.

Boston police and the police of other Massachusetts cities and towns are searching for Florence Leland, 24 years old, alias Mildred Denon, alias Mildred Leland, dog addict, forger and bogus check passer, who escaped from the Worcester State Hospital several days ago.

MRS. STOKES TO TAKE STAND MONDAY

New York, Oct. 25 (U.N.R.)—In defense of her honor, Helen Elwood Stokes, young wife of W. E. D. Stokes, will take the witness stand Monday, Samuel Littenmyer, her counsel, announced today when trial of the divorce suit was resumed.

Mrs. D. Stokes' counsel, admitted that Mrs. Stokes made damaging threats into the testimony of her husband's witnesses who told of alleged weekend visits she had made to Bethel, Ct. with Wallace. However, he presented sensational evidence in rebuttal. Reports that Stokes and his wife, Madame client had come to a bitter disagreement over current in the courtroom today. Stokes, it was said, was annoyed at Stokes' interference in the case. Stokes had questioned Stokes' judgment in handling the case. Stokes is understood to have sent Stokes word that any communication from him must be made through a third person. Martha Jones, cook for Polar T. Wallace, co-respondent named by Stokes, testified today that Ann Macintosh, a negro who recently testified she saw the defendant at breakfast parties in Wallace's home, had never set foot in the apartment. The Macintosh woman said she had been present when these early morning breakfast parties were held and described some of the scenes. The cook declared that she, herself, had prepared and served the breakfasts alluded to and that she

It's such a simple thing to achieve yet so important in its effect that you'll wonder why more makers don't strive to produce equally pleasing results.

The House of Kuppenheimer carries out different styles in the most appropriate fabrics. Patterns and colors must blend with the tone of the model. The linings, buttons and thread with which the seams are sewn, must all harmonize. Mere trifles, you may say, but perfection is made up of trifles.

Thus the most finical find nothing to criticize in a Kuppenheimer garment, while the less observant, not analyzing the cause, are none the less appreciative of the pleasing effect.

FORBES FACES TRIAL FOR GRAFT

Washington, Oct. 25 (Universal)—The Department of Justice today was to begin prosecution of alleged graft and fraud in the Veterans' Bureau as brought out before the special Senate investigation committee.

This was stated officially after Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty held a long conference with President Coolidge. Both agreed, it was stated, that in view of allegations that officials had been bribed in the letting of contracts and the purchase of supplies that the case now is one for the grand jury. It is believed that the investigation will extend even beyond the sphere of government influence of the Veterans' Bureau. Forbes was a powerful political figure when he came here and while he remained at the head of the veterans' organization, he had strong friends in Washington. Mortimer that all hotel bills and other expenses for the journey were paid by Mortimer.

From his place of seclusion here, Charles B. Forbes, former director of the Veterans' Bureau, issued a statement today.

"I do not feel that I ought to make any statement in advance of the full and complete testimony which I shall give under oath on the witness stand," said Mr. Forbes' statement.

"However, at the instant urging of my friends and in response to inquiries from the press, I cannot refrain from saying that every charge and every word of testimony, especially that of Elias H. Mortimer, reflecting on my personal or official integrity, are utterly and absolutely false and without the slightest foundation.

AT 8 O'CLOCK yesterday afternoon Communists were marching on Berlin to upset the Republican government.

In this blessed country, at about the same time, the public was learning of a tobacco combination, amounting to two hundred and fifty millions of dollars, combining big interests, simplifying business—all excellent, provided the public keeps track of what is done.

Over in Europe they are wearing things to pieces. Here we are building up. Happy we.

JUDGE GARY, who runs the biggest industrial enterprise in the world, isn't worried about the United States yet. It is business men who are worried. If we mind our own business and realize that we must attend to our affairs and Europe also, this country will be all right for a long time to come.

JUDGE GARY'S company employs tens of thousands of men. It virtually is the iron business of the United States, and he is probably as good a judge of business conditions as there is in the country. His optimism means something.

LOYD GEORGE tells Pittsburg he fears a new great war, worse than the last. England and America, he thinks, might combine to prevent it.

At least one Russian editor hopes that the big war is coming and that it will start with bloody civil war in Germany.

MEN ARE like murderous wolves, running in packs. Bloodshed causes more bloodshed; disaster brings on more disaster.

The Japanese government admits brutal massacre of Koreans in the excitement following earthquake. Falsely accused of starting fire and of poisoning wells—accusation as old as the human race—the unfortunate Koreans were hunted down by the mob. The Japanese police unable to protect them, voluntary police refusing to interfere.

Such is human nature when the mob starts, whether in China, Russia, Germany, or here in the United States.

THE LEARNED Harvard Professor Shuler, in his book on the mob, declares that even a measure of cleanliness by certain influences could be turned into a murderous, lynching mob. Our animal ancestors are still alive in the brains that we inherit from them.

THE ST. LOUIS STARS readers get great service to the country in its exposure of a medical diploma mill, turning out graduates of the country as men of ignorance, and exposing them with "diplomas," authorizing them to practice medicine and destroy life.

THIS EXPOSURE by the St. Louis Star ought to fill with deep gratitude medical men to every part of the country, and with deeper gratitude the mothers and fathers often at the mercy of "doctors," in whom the only knowledge required was how to find $300 to buy a diploma.

MEDICAL MEN who have consented to allow content to State boards, continuing their activities to attacks on other schools of healing, have had time to investigate their own case, and you in order, could also be to let the St. Louis Star has done for them.

GEORGE HARVEY says the United States will join in a conference that would give recuperation and stability. That sounds innocent. You ask, "Why not join a conference, any conference, what harm can that do?" Then you remember the old story of the loving mother that refused to let her daughter attend the picnic, reminding her of what happened "at the picnic."

YOU REMEMBER what happened at the last conference, with Washington, Japan and the men from France, when they finished their conference, our distinguished "statesman" reminded you of the canary bird that met the cat.

No more conference. If you please, George Harvey. Bear in mind what happened at the last picnic.

DAD AIDS GIRL IN TRAPPING ERRING MATE

MRS. MARY KOENIG, CHAS. E. HODGES

The former Mary Hodges of Brooklyn and her insurance company president father leaving Suffolk County Court where she was divorced from Pido Koenig on the testimony of her father and herself. They trapped Koenig in a hotel room with a girl.

MRS. KOENIG IS FORMER STABLE AWARDED DIVORCE

The infidelity of Pido Koenig, who is well known in the younger upper social set of Boston and Brooklyn, proved his undoing—as far as matrimony is concerned.

Despite his name, his charming wife, formerly Miss Mary Hodges of Brooklyn, discovered he was not an exponent of fidelity, and Chief Justice Hill in the Suffolk County divorce court cut the knot that was tied in 1920 at one of the most charming weddings along the North Shore.

Mrs. Koenig stepped from her role of young society matron and to gether with her father, Charles E. Hodges, large insurance company president, turned sleuth and followed her husband to Jamaica, L. I. There she told Judge Hill she found her husband living with a pretty young thing in a delightful town. Her father surprised the young man, according to his testimony, in a room with a charming young lady who was attired in a beautifully-dressed Japanese kimono. Mr. Hodges testified that his son-in-law confessed that he was leading a double life at the Jamaica hotel.

Mr. Koenig is the son of Mrs. Joseph Pay of Commonwealth Avenue. It was there that the young Koenigs went to live when they were married in 1920.

DONOVAN PAID HIS LAWYER $17,500 AFTER RAID; CORCORAN GOT IT

WANTED TO TAKE CASE TO COURT

first slipped into the little rear chair. Today Mr. Donovan knows the feelings of "Jilly the Lure." No money did Special Prosecutor Hill today say "that's all," then up sprang half a dozen attorneys asking for the kick off. In Donovan they had a real football. His business is law, his passion, it is charged, ladies.

Attorney Dugan, for Harry E. Levenson, was the first to be heard. In three minutes the shaggy, long-legged witness was showered with questions concerning the girls of money, rums, fur coats, diamonds, handbags and other things.

"Today," Dugan, the lure who sold him out to the water. Today sat snug and complacent next to "Jilly the Lure" Corcoran to "Shakers" Row. At times a nudged bill and whispered as her former adviser shrank back. From calm before the last battle.

Did he give today for cost? Did he give her bracelets, diamonds, watches, $1,000 to start a hairdressing shop? Did he pay for the apartment he was caught in? Did he make time to New York with her? Did they go on the same train? What house did they stop at? Did he pay the bill? Did he know she was married when he courted her? Did he have improper relations with her? Did he think she was a good girl when he met her? I think every woman in good when I meet one," shouted the expert on weather and hides against the referees to answer.

Several questions he refused to answer. How many times a week did he call on "Jilly"? "Once or twice." Did he furnish the money for her first? "May have." This very innocently.

But they went to New York on separate trains. He was sure of that and today, the lure, paid for her own ticket.

Did he meet Ted after the shake-down? Oh, yes, used to meet her in one of the hotels—the ladies' waiting room.

Yes, "J. L." as the lure knew the man with the shaggy hair, a big frame, in the footlock for the lawyers now. He faced a very nervous, a machine that was his memory overhauled. Verily these lawyers are very rough. Used the testimony and are for justice.

Donovan went on the witness stand today following an inter-you were talking? A—Hardly, I had no way of knowing. I had only heard Mr. Corcoran talk once before. Q—You went to Corcoran's office with John P. MacDonald, your counsel, didn't you? A—Yes. Q—What was the purpose of the meeting there? A—To make a settlement of the case. Q—Did you have any talk with Mr. Corcoran? A—Very little. I can't recall it just what was said. Mr. MacDonald did most of the talking. Q—Do you recall anything Mr. MacDonald said? He is going to be a witness, I believe? A—No, there was considerable controversy over the amount of money to be paid, etc.

PAID $17,500
Q—Did you pay Mr. MacDonald anything for the purpose of settling this case? A—I think $17,500. Q—Have you now told us all you recall of your conversation with Corcoran? A—Yes.

Q—State anything that was said by you or by Mr. Dugan after the occurrence at the apartment on Buckminster street last night? A—Nothing further. I think I said I was very much disturbed and that a large amount of money was at stake. I also told her two or three days after the occurrence that I understood they had a warrant out in Brighton Court for our arrest and that we might escape if I paid over a large lot of money. I also told her I couldn't afford to pay a lot of money. Q—What did she say? A—I can't recall.

Q—Did you have any talk with her in regard to this matter at a later date? A—Yes, I met her in the ladies' parlor at Young's Hotel within a day or two, but I can't recall the conversation. It was to try to see if there was any way to take to have these proceedings stopped. Q—Did she before the settlement took place? A—Yes. Q—Did you talk with her again before the settlement through MacDonald took place? A—I talked with her several times in the ladies' parlor of Young's Hotel. Q—Since the settlement took place have you talked with her? A—Yes. Q—Where? A—I couldn't say just where.

Q—What was said? A—I asked her and she told me she did it unwillingly and was forced into doing it.

Q—Did you see him take up the telephone? A—No. Q—State just what took place in regard to a telephone, from the time Mr. Lyons entered the room in the manner you described. A—I told him I like to get out, to send his men out. He said he couldn't until he had talked with the man who had hired him.

Q—Shortly after that did William J. Corcoran arrive at the 147 A? Within half an hour. Q—What did Corcoran say to you and what did you say to him? Is there anything more you recall that you haven't already told the jury? A—Nothing further.

TELEPHONE CALL
Q—Did you on the next morning receive any telephone message from your office from any of these defendants? A—I received a telephone call shortly after 10 o'clock. Q—Did you talk over the telephone with her? A—Yes. Q—Did you know with whom

Paid the Cash

Q—Watch? A—Yes. Q—Several fur coats? A—No. Q—Any clothing? A—No. Q—Any money? A—At times. Q—At one time did you give her $1,000? A—No (emphatically). Q—Didn't you give her $1,000 at the Westminster Hotel to start her in the hairdressing business? A—No. Q—Did you know when she got her divorce from her husband, was it in September, 1922? A—I should say so. Q—Did you furnish her any money for the divorce? A—No. Q—Didn't you give her $100 to pay Mr. McManus to get her divorce? A—No. Q—Who paid her hotel bills? A—I refuse to answer. Q—That is on the same ground as you refused to answer the other questions? A—Yes.

KNOWS IT NOW
Q—At any of the hotels in New York have you known her to sign the register under the name of Mrs. Donovan? A—No, not that I remember. Q—Are you clear on that. A—I think so. Q—If she was married and you saw her and you gave her those presents, you know now that you were going with another man's wife isn't that so? A—I think so. Q—And during all that period you were a married man and living at home with your family? A—Yes. Q—When did you know she was a married woman? A—I didn't know she was married until a short time before the raid. Q—When you met her did you think she was a good girl, a virtuous woman? A—I suppose every woman is good when I first meet her. Q—Did you ever hear from more than she sources anything about Mrs. Dugan's character? A—I heard remarks passed about her. Q—What remarks? A—Why, remarks that she liked to have a good time before the raid. Q—That's all? A—To that effect.

THOUGHT HER DEVOTED
Q—Did you in your own heart think she was a good girl up to the time she was arrested? A—Yes.

After being told by Judge Quinn of his rights, Donovan declined to answer a question as to his relations with Theresa Dugan. Q—On what ground do you decline to answer that question? A—On the ground that the answer may tend to incriminate me. Q—Have you hired a hotel room and gone there with Mrs. Dugan? A—I refuse to answer. Q—Did you go to the Buckminster Hotel with her? A—I don't recall it. Q—Did you go to the Hotel Lannan with her? A—I called on her there one day when she was sick. Q—Have you been to New York with her? A—No, but I met her there.

SEPARATE TRAINS
Q—Haven't you been with her to New York at least twenty times? A—I don't think so. Q—Did you go on a train with her? A—No. Q—Did you arrange to meet her there? A—Yes. Q—Who went first, you or she? A—That all depended. Q—What do you mean? A—On what train could get. Q—For what reason didn't you go on the same train? A—I didn't think it policy. Q—What hotels did you stop at in New York with Mrs. Dugan? A—I couldn't say. Q—Do you know what hotels she stopped at? A—What particular times? Q—At any time when you met her in New York?

The witness at this point was silent for more than two minutes. Q—Will you answer that? A—She stopped at the Ansonia. Q—Did she ever stop at the Waldorf Astoria? A—She may have. Q—At the Belmont? A—She may have.

DENIES $1,000 GIFT
Q—Had you given her presents of money and clothing? A—I may have. Q—What? bracelet? A—I guess I did.

THOUGHT HER SINGLE
Q—What name did you know her by? A—Theresa Dugan. Q—Did you know that she was a married woman? A—No, not at that time.

Q—When was the first time you learned she was a married woman? A—The first time I knew she was married was about the time the raid took place. Q—Who told you she was married until about the time of the raid? A—I don't recall.

Q—Did you ever tell Mr. Dugan that for the sum of $1,000 Mrs. Dugan of Somerville released James E. Donovan of Boston from any action in law or equity that he might then have or ever have had "from the beginning of the world" and was forced into doing it.

SIGNED BY DUGAN
The document indicated that it came from Attorney John F. MacDonald's office, was dated July 9, 1918, was signed by Mr. Dugan and witnessed by Harry E. Levenson and John P. MacDonald, who was present in the courtroom during Donovan's testimony.

Q—Did you ever go to Brighton Court in connection with this matter? A—No, I did not. Q—Did you ever tell Mr. Dugan you had been to Brighton Court? A—No. Q—Was any civil suit brought against you by Mr. Dugan? A—No. This ended the direct examination. Attorney Fred J. Dugan, counsel for Levenson, then cross-examined.

Q—If Mr. MacDonald takes the witness stand are you willing to waive any privileges that you may have as his client, so that he may testify? Donovan then turned to Judge Quinn and asked what his rights were. "Are you willing to let him MacDonald testify as to any talks you have had with him privately?" "No," replied Donovan. Q—When did you first meet Mrs. Dugan? A—The Spring of 1918.

Q—Have you since had any talk with her? A—Several. Q—In regard to the occurrence at the flat on Buckminster street? A—No. Q—Did she tell you anything about her part or the part of any one else as to the occurrence at the flat? A—No, she didn't tell me anything about that.

TOLD OF OTHER CASES
Q—Did she tell you what she meant by saying she was innocent? A—She said she didn't take part in any of the other cases. Q—Did she tell you what other cases she meant? A—Yes, the Corcoran case, the Korn and Merrill cases. Q—Did she ever deny to you that she ever participated in your case? A—No. Q—Or knew before it happened that it was going to happen? A—No. Q—At some time subsequent to the settlement of this case did you understand that she was a witness? A—Yes. Q—Is this it? A—That is all. Prosecutor Hill then read the release to the jury. It was a technical legal document, filled with legal verbiage, and stated:

Q—Did you have any talk with her in regard to this matter at a later date? A—Yes, I met her in the ladies' parlor at Young's Hotel within a day or two, but I can't recall the conversation. It was to try to see if there was any way to take to have these proceedings stopped. Q—Did she before the settlement took place? A—Yes. Q—Did you talk with her again before the settlement through MacDonald took place? A—I talked with her several times in the ladies' parlor of Young's Hotel. Q—Since the settlement took place have you talked with her? A—Yes. Q—Where? A—I couldn't say just where.

Q—What was said? A—I asked her and she told me she did it unwillingly and was forced into doing it.

When John Jacob Astor reads the will he discovers that all the property goes to a nephew, Patrick O'Day, in Ireland. Astor is made trustee and sends a guardian to Ireland to look after the property. The O'Day family is about to be terribly disappointed. Their poor home in Ireland, when a strange solicitor appears and informs them of their good fortune. Patricia, disguised as her brother, who dies on the trip, and her father, arrive in New York. Delavan becomes interested in Robert Fulton's steamboat and promises $10,000 to build one. But when he learns that Robert Fulton does not suspect, Pul's father decides making her swear never to reveal her identity to Delavan.

Much was to be made, at last, of Mr. Robert Fulton. New York had awakened, a little late, but still in time, to the realization that it harbored a great man, one who bade fair to become a celebrity. It had ignored him, mocked him, laughed behind his back at him—

THE ENGAGEMENT RING—Allister McCormick and Miss Mary Landon Baker, the Heiress Who Changed Her Mind Eight Times About Marrying Him.

WHEN young Allister McCormick, heir to a large lump of the McCormick reaper millions, and on-again-off-again fiancee of Miss Mary Landon Baker, the capricious Chicago heiress beauty, announced his unexpected engagement to Miss Joan Stevens, of London, England, society in two hemispheres smiled broadly.

(Below), Two Pictures of Miss Baker as a Dancer at Left, in Society Theatricals; and as a War Worker with a French "Blue Devil."

less than eight times, had the habit. What, asked society, broke him of it? This is the answer the wise ones give—Allister McCormick, like a man surfeited with fancy cooking, who craves simple home fare, merely went to the "other extreme."

Perhaps the pictures on this page explain this theory even better than the wise ones can. They tell a story in contrasts—the very contrasts, no doubt, that sprang to the much-jilted Mr. McCormick's mind when he made his choice between Miss Baker and Miss Stevens.

Here are the pictures of Miss Baker—a batch of them selected among dozens that have been brightening the front pages of the nation's newspapers ever since Mary Landon Baker made her gilded debut on the Gold Coast. Mary, in air, playing tennis; Mary perched rakishly on the rail of a transatlantic liner; Mary dancing in the chorus of a society ballet; Mary in a war worker's uniform, fox-trotting with Gaston Maurer, of the French Alpine chasseur.

Marriage was suggested to Miss Baker, and Miss Baker accepted the suggestion. She became engaged to Allister McCormick in the Winter of 1921, and all her friends said, "Well, we suppose flyaway Mary will settle down at last!" But Mary was still a rich, restless, high-spirited American girl. If pictures had been taken of this phase of her capriciousness, they would be something like this:

May, 1921—Allister McCormick, his groomsmen and his guests waiting for-lornly at the church; a message arrives,
"Miss Baker indisposed."
January, 1922—Allister McCormick,

February, 1922—Miss Baker cancelling her steamship passage in New York immediately after announcing she would marry Allister McCormick as soon as she arrived in England.

wedding will take place in June.
May, 1922—Miss Baker announces the wedding will NOT take place in June.
June, 1922—Miss Baker announces the wedding will take place in a few weeks.
July, 1922—Miss Baker announces the wedding has been postponed until August.

September 18, 1922 — "Postponed again!" says Miss Baker.

Exactly what Allister McCormick's feelings were all this time, only his best friends know. It was, of course, part of his code to say nothing. Presumably, however, he was a bit dazed—not only by Mr. McCormick finally did speak. He announced his engagement to another girl. And when society began to ask what manner of girl Miss Joan Stevens was, society received a distinct surprise. For the second girl of his choice appeared to be the very antithesis of Miss Baker.

"YES."

Again pictures tell the story. There were only a few of them, but "home girl" was written all over them. Miss Stevens, young and dimpled and shy, posed in a simple white pleated dress and sweater; Miss Stevens, with her mother and her little brother, on the lawn of the unpretentious family home—these were typical of Allister's new fiancées.

"We may be wrong," the gossip murmurs, "but it seems to us that after his experience with 'contrary Mary,' Allister has decided to play a contented Darby with an old-fashioned Joan!"

Medbury Says

By John P. Medbury

A FORTY-EIGHT minister has decided a union that brides and grooms must not keep each other waiting at the church. If you're too busy to get married, postpone the wedding, because you won't have any time afterward.

WHEN the groom makes a date to meet the bride at the altar he should be there, even if he has to wait for her.

ONE dame has been waiting twenty years for the groom and he hasn't shown up yet.

AFTER hanging around that long, a woman is bound to get discouraged.

NO matter how much your fiancé loves you, it soon becomes monotonous.

OF course some women run all ways late. When your bride tells you she'll meet you at the church at nine o'clock, it's best to be there by noon so that you'll arrive a few minutes before she does.

A LOS ANGELES bride kept the groom waiting at the church for three days and was furious to find him when she got there.

SHE was so sure that she went right down and said him for breach of promise.

ONE bride was so anxious to be prompt that she arrived at the altar two days ahead of time.

SHE'S suing her husband for divorce now and demands that her attorney start from the first day that she arrived at the church.

IT won't be long before every church will have a time clock in the vestibule.

IF the wife is late the husband will be allowed to deduct it later on from her separate maintenance.

DO NOT LET HATRED BECOME AN OBSESSION.

It is not foolish for you to go on hating your enemies? You annoy yourself and you are putting some mighty disagreeable lines in your face.

What do you get out of all this hatred?

If someone has done you a wrong, why allow it to so poison your spirit and your waking moments that you feel angry and spiteful most of the time?

You are causing yourself much more uneasiness by constantly brooding upon the wrong and trying to make ways to get even, than you cause the other man by what measures you are able to show toward him.

You cannot help thinking some persons, but why let the thought become an obsession?
